 Airwallex, a Hong Kong-based cross-border payments company, is exploring acquisitions and strategic partnerships to fuel growth, said Lucy Liu, president and co-founder. (Please click on the hyperlink above to read this article)

Brief Summary:

Airwallex allows businesses to send fast payments globally. It charges 0.5% - 1.0% above their interbank FX rate and payments can be made in 23 currencies to 130 countries.

Investors:

Tencent, Sequoia Capital China, DST Global, Hillhouse Capital, Horizons Ventures, ANZi Ventures, Square Peg Capital, Gobi Partners and Salesforce Ventures

CEO and co-founder:

Jack Zhang

Interesting Fact:

COVID-19 caused about a 20% slowdown against its initial growth targets, the executive said. But Airwallex is not as impacted as other industries due to the digital nature of its platform. The upside is that many customers are forced to adapt to offer digital payments solutions to their customers and see the value of Airwallex's payments platform. Additionally, certain verticals of Airwallex have seen growth amid the pandemic such as online education providers.

Most Recent Coverage:

 Remitly, a Seattle-based company specializing in overseas money transfer, is building itself for long-term independence, CEO Matt Oppenheimer told this news service. Oppenheimer gave this answer in a response to the question of whether Remitly could pursue an IPO. (Please click on the hyperlink above to read this article)

Brief Summary:

Remitly decided early on that it would look to create a complete vertical stack, which it has done thus far. While difficult to do, it is perhaps easier to create a vertical stack solution in money transfer than in some other areas of financial services, the CEO said.

COO and co-founder:

Josh Hug

Interesting Fact:

The money transfer market only started to really explode in 2010 and 2011, Oppenheimer said during his conference talk. Growth in the market was aided by the spread of smartphones usage, he said, particularly the iPhone which only was introduced in 2007.
